Hospitals and nursing homes are responding to changes in the health care system by modifying staffing levels and the mix of nursing personnel. But do these changes endanger the quality of patient care? Do nursing staff suffer increased rates of injury, illness, or stress because of changing workplace demands? These questions are addressed in Nursing Staff in Hospitals and Nursing Homes, a thorough and authoritative look at today's health care system that also takes a long-term view of staffing needs for nursing as the nation moves into the next century. The committee draws fundamental conclusions about the evolving role of nurses in hospitals and nursing homes and presents recommendations about staffing decisions, nursing training, measurement of quality, reimbursement, and other areas. The volume also discusses work-related injuries, violence toward and abuse of nursing staffs, and stress among nursing personnel--and examines whether these problems are related to staffing levels. Included is a readable overview of the underlying trends in health care that have given rise to urgent questions about nurse staffing: population changes, budget pressures, and the introduction of new technologies. Nursing Staff

"Nurses play a vital role in improving the safety and quality of patient care -- not only in the hospital or ambulatory treatment facility, but also of community-based care and the care performed by family members. Nurses need know what proven techniques and interventions they can use to enhance patient outcomes. To address this need, the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ), with additional funding from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, has prepared this comprehensive, 1,400-page, handbook for nurses on patient safety and quality -- Patient Safety and Quality: An Evidence-Based Handbook for Nurses. (AHRQ Publication No. 08-0043)." --Online AHRQ blurb, <http://www.ahrq.gov/qual/nurseshdbk>.

The Future of Nursing explores how nurses' roles, responsibilities, and education should change significantly to meet the increased demand for care that will be created by health care reform and to advance improvements in America's increasingly complex health system. At more than 3 million in number, nurses make up the single largest segment of the health care work force. They also spend the greatest amount of time in delivering patient care as a profession. Nurses therefore have valuable insights and unique abilities to contribute as partners with other health care professionals in improving the quality and safety of care as envisioned in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) enacted this year. Nurses should be fully engaged with other health professionals and assume leadership roles in redesigning care in the United States. To ensure its members are well-prepared, the profession should institute residency training for nurses, increase the percentage of nurses who attain a bachelor's degree to 80 percent by 2020, and double the number who pursue doctorates. Furthermore, regulatory and institutional obstacles -- including limits on nurses' scope of practice -- should be removed so that the health system can reap the full benefit of nurses' training, skills, and knowledge in patient care. In this book, the Institute of Medicine makes recommendations for an action-oriented blueprint for the future of nursing.

Staff Nurse To Manager charts in comprehensive detail a relatively simple blueprint for nurses who desire to have more impact on overall patient care through effective management, and presents a plan of recovery for those who have "burned out" from the rigors of bedside toils. The book clearly and concisely lays out managerial tools and tips which anyone can easily utilize as they delve into the management arena. The purpose of this descriptive quantitative study is to investigate the perceptions of staff nurses about practical nursing students in an acute care setting. The setting is a 25-bed critical access rural, central Minnesota hospital. Participants included staff nurses who work with practical nursing students in clinical rotation at the hospital. The theoretical framework utilized for this research is Patricia Brenner's From Novice to Expert (Benner, Tanner, & Chesla, 2009). In the clinical setting, the staff nurse has a strong position of influence in nursing education. Through better understanding of staff nurses' perspectives and attitudes toward practical nursing students, the nurse educator can better plan, develop and coordinate ideal learning experiences (Jackson & Neighbors, 1988). The 54-item Nursing Students' Contribution to Clinical Agencies instrument developed by Patsdaughter, Medici, and Gatson-Grindel (2003) was used to collect and organize data on the staff nurses' perception. The research study findings suggest that staff nurses perception of working with practical nursing students in the acute care setting overall were positive. The results of this research determined that there were differences in the perceptions of practical nursing students and contribution to patient care varying on their self-identified rating on Benner's Model--novice, advanced beginner, competent, proficient, and expert. In conclusion, the staff nurses' perceptions of practical nursing students will impact the clinical learning environment. The nurse educator needs to be an active facilitator and work collaboratively with the staff nurse in the clinical environment to provide quality education to the practical nursing students.

This book explores the various features of work environments that affect nurses' experiences of their work, their interactions with co-workers and patients, and ultimately health care quality and patient outcomes. Using a broad and comprehensive approach, the authors identify the most extensively researched and best-understood concepts in the field and presents a critical and up-to-date review of the evidence regarding causes and effects of work environment features. It then presents evidence regarding organizational interventions aimed at broad ranges of clinical practices and outcomes, such as team-based interventions and management practices to improve practice climate. The ideas, approaches, and evidence are presented by a team of researchers and experienced practitioner/leaders; taken together, they form a state-of-the-science toolkit. Unique features of this book include a systematic presentation of best practices in nursing and healthcare leadership, along with the conceptual grounding and empirical support for these approaches, and extensive demonstrations of how these practices, many of which originated in North America, apply to European contexts.
